truck are in high demand, too. What makes a truck builder? Who is capable of building a high quality, eco-friendly vehicle? Those who succeed most. Although, it is more than the construction of good trucks. It is a combination of the down-to-earth manner of the owner, the quality of the material, and the creative mind and ingenuity of the builder. The owner must first, show respect, loyalty, and support. He or she must have a vision of what is needed, and, not just what is needed for the money. He or she must not allow greed to affect the relationship. He or she must create an atmosphere where the owner and the builder can work out their problems together, when they are faced with challenge or setback. It is the owner's duty to be fair to the builder, to treat him or her with respect, and to insist that the work be done in a timely manner. After all, what is the point of the owner building a truck if the builder cannot deliver what is promised? Also, the owner must have pride in what is made. They must not only believe in what they are doing, but also allow themselves to be proud of the trucks they build. They must treat the truck with the highest level of respect. Showing respect to others and acting in an honorable way is also important to the owner. They must handle every situation with calmness and poise. The owner must not be cruel, and allow themselves to be cheated. They must keep clear boundaries when they are building a truck. The owner must also be strong, but flexible. They must have the courage to stand up for what they feel is right, but at the same time, they must be open to the feelings of others. Being flexible and understanding is needed in a relationship. Although, sometimes it is not as easy to be honest and transparent with someone as you think it should be. This requires a touch of wisdom. If either partner does not agree with the ideas expressed about the truck, they must respectfully express their feelings. The owner must not be narrow-minded. They must never say that the truck is either good or bad. They must be open to views from others. They must be open and give someone else a chance to express their ideas. They must say, "I agree with you on this point, but I disagree on this point." The owner must not be too hard to get along with. They must be firm, but not hard. They must be able to forgive and forget problems 82138339de
