A: If you just want a string that contains the name of the jar file the program you are using is contained in, you can read it from the last element of the classes manifest. That's how to do it in an Ant script with JAR Task, for example: If you want to retrieve it with just the java command, you can use the -jar argument to specify a jar file: $ java -jar myjarfile.jar -classpath my.jar:my.classes.jar Given the info in the comments, you
