Guidestar Partner Awarded Grant This year marked the 35th anniversary of the commitment of the Guilford County Board of Commissioners to providing financial assistance to communities to help preserve and maintain historical buildings and facilities that are a part of Guilford County's unique heritage. The Guilford County Board of Commissioners, the Guilford County Chamber of Commerce, and the Guilford County Free-Enterprise Foundation have been working collaboratively with the town of Dowagiac on preserving and restoring the Dowagiac Railroad Station. The town of Dowagiac applied for and received a $10,000 grant from the Guilford County Free Enterprise Foundation (GCFef) to assist with the restoration and redecoration of the 1920s era Dowagiac Railroad Station. A private non-profit organization, GCFef is a Guilford County 501(c)(3) corporation established in 1989 to create and maintain a network of support for local nonprofits and community associations. The Dowagiac City Council will host a ground breaking ceremony later this fall for a $1.5 million restoration project that will transform the historic railroad station into a community center. The 3,000 square foot main floor of the building will be a large multipurpose community meeting space. Public restrooms, a concession stand and café will also be located on the main floor. Other possible uses for the community center include use as a venue for special community events, meeting place for local businesses, and the location for long-term events and meetings such as special family reunions, educational seminars, farmer's markets, and volunteer events. The building will also include a classroom, multipurpose room, and an office area. The community center was constructed in 1913 by the Dowagiac and Lake Michigan Rail Company as a depot serving both the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad and the Grand Trunk Western Railroad. In 1922, the St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad bought the trackage rights to the train station. In 1964, the railroads shut down the station and went through with plans to raze the structure. The Northern Indiana Passenger Railway bought the Dowagiac station and revived the rail network in 1966, including many trains to and from Chicago and St. Louis. When the NIPR went out of business, the station was sold to a commercial developer. The Dowagiac city government purchased the building from the developer in 2006. The recently

"The William Clyde Guitar featuring the patented Bloomback Chambered Maple body, set neck and modern electronics is not only good looking, it is good sounding" By Steve Ranson Older models of Gibson guitars used a chambered body, but not anymore. There were a number of reasons why chambered bodies came to an end: related to cost, manufacturing process, versatility, and quality control. But here's the thing about Gibson guitars made from the early to mid 1970's: there were some made using chambered bodies. The one that garnered the most attention for one of the most famous artists of all time. It was the psychedelic-era Gibson Firebird guitar used by Jimi Hendrix. Now the William Clyde guitar, made in 1976, boasts the same body style, set neck, and art deco design. Somewhere in here is a slice of American history worth highlighting, but sometimes you have to get back to the present. What is more important right now is being proud of those that came before us, whether you know them or not. Suffice it to say that today's William Clyde guitar, the CAGED #59 Chambered Maple guitar, has a rich history that it is truly deserving of. I reviewed it a number of years ago, in the August 12, 2008 issue of Acoustic Guitar Magazine. Since then, it has been used by hundreds of musicians around the world. Over the years, I have received countless letters from people around the world about the guitar and how it's affected their music and craft. This is music, after all. As a recipient of so many letters, I could make a book of them. Now we have David Baldwin- a world-renowned bassist from the UK who is currently recording a long-planned solo album, to see the guitar in person. He wrote: "I am playing the Gibson William Clyde guitar, personally endorsed by the late Jimi Hendrix. I just want you to know that I really like it!" First off, I want to acknowledge two things: first, I never actually knew Jimi Hendrix, but I like his music and appreciate the legacy he left. Second, I need to thank the person who mentioned me to David: as I told you, it's never easy to reach out to strangers, but I was so glad
