"In the past, FIFA games have greatly improved over the course of our yearly instalments, but we've remained in the same game system with the same control logic," said senior producer, Ian Marshall. "With FIFA 22, we're changing the overall game system, but this year's FIFA game is more focused on our HyperMotion engine, so we're delivering a dramatically enhanced version of what players had previously experienced in FIFA titles. Players will find that goalkeepers are different, while new passing and shooting mechanics add a depth to the traditional game model." "FIFA 22 is our most ambitious title yet," said EA SPORTS FIFA Executive Vice President Andrew Brazier. "Players can now control free kicks and penalty kicks, and enjoy improved goalkeeper movement, tackling and defensive systems. While previous FIFA titles saw players trapped in a carousel of unwanted actions after losing possession of the ball, FIFA 22 puts players in a unique, free-wheeling flowing motion." FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion," a new interactive, advanced motion capture engine that enables a range of authentic player movements. In addition to using HyperMotion, EA SPORTS FIFA 22 employs game new physics, enhanced player collisions, ball flight, and "Fluid Dynamics" to bring fans closer to the action, which impacts how the game is played. AI Improvements The FIFA 22 "HyperMotion" technology has made significant improvements to the AI team, and players are better able to utilise the pace of the game. The new team AI is lightning quick, allowing for fluid and accurate passing and movement, and players are now more familiar with the ball, enabling accurate and fast-paced close ball interactions. Off-ball Movement Players will also be able to move freely off the ball, becoming aware of where they're going to as they approach the ball, allowing for more fluent attacking play. Players will even use their off-ball movements to influence where they get the ball; multiple passes that are thrown into the opponents' half of the pitch after receiving an off-ball pass will help the team quickly build possession. As the ball player gets closer to goal, they'll also run more, allowing the player and team to more quickly break down the opposition defence. AI defenders will react to off-ball movement to make sure they're the ones with possession when the
