Modeling in BIM 360º is not the only way to model your work, but it is the quickest and easiest. Why model? Because models are easy to update when needed If a client or employee wants to make changes to the building, floors, or rooms: models allow you to see the real result of the changes you make no matter if they are local changes or distributed globally they can be updated as many times as you want they can be shared with many users Improve collaboration and consistency of your models With a single BIM 360º file, you can share your models and see them in real-time. Your file will not only present the model but also any changes you make to the model. The result? you and your colleagues will be able to see changes you make at once, without having to reach out to each other. You will be able to see the situation and have input for your team to make the right decisions View, animate, and add annotations for changes to the models Capture the construction process When an event is being planned or executed, models are the only way to capture the real situation. If you are modeling using Revit 2016, you can define a reference model in BIM 360º and automatically show that model in the 3D app. All interactions and changes made on the model can be annotated and be synced to Revit. You will be able to view changes in real-time and extract BIM 360º information such as costs, schedules, and more. Easy to share with other 3D apps BIM 360º models can be exported in a format readable by other 3D programs such as Autocad, Revit, MS Project and others. So, when the time comes to
