She is an Assistant Professor at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, the founding director of the Wisconsin School of Emotion Regulation, and a former doctoral student of Lawrence LeDoux. Academic career Rubin received her undergraduate degree in psychology from Tufts University and completed her graduate training at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, earning a Ph.D. under the supervision of William S. Powers and Lawrence W. LeDoux. She has published six research articles, as well as chapters in multiple edited books. In 2008, Rubin became the founding director of the Wisconsin School of Emotion Regulation, where she trains and certifies therapists in the principles of emotion regulation. In 2010, she published the book Emotional Regulation: Mindfulness and Cognitive Techniques for Regulating the Emotions. She is the recipient of a research grant from the National Institute of Mental Health and the Althea Frank Center for Child Advocacy and Protection. Research Cognitive reappraisal Rubin's research focuses on the role of cognitive reappraisal in emotion regulation. She was the first to examine the effects of reappraisal on physiological outcomes. She found that people who were trained to use reappraisal were better able to manage their physiological arousal when subsequently exposed to negative emotional stimuli. Emotion representation In her book Emotional Regulation: Mindfulness and Cognitive Techniques for Regulating the Emotions, Rubin argues that people who have developed an understanding of their emotions can better regulate their emotional responses. To do this, people must first learn to "think like an emotion". Rubin argues that the emotion expression model, where people view emotions as a physical state in the body, is outdated and leads to unrealistic and maladaptive beliefs about emotion regulation. The Big "Play" on Jersey Shore beach house may not have happened As we posted earlier, the Jersey Shore cast has something very big on the horizon: the end of the show. Real estate website Zillow, which tracks sales of celebrity homes around the U.S., has just released the top homes sold in the U.S. for 2009. According to Zillow's data, the most-expensive celebrity home in the country is a 5,100-square-foot, 7-bedroom waterfront estate owned by a couple named Micallef. But in the most recent quarter, Jersey Shore's Season 3 beach house sold for $3.675 million. So it's unlikely that our favorite partying wannabe house was actually sold. The Zillow data show that the most-expensive celebrity home sold in the quarter was the Greek Island of Spetses. Real estate broker Brad R. Webb, whose website is Swell Real Estate, told The Wall Street Journal that he "talks to a lot of [show] buyers, and I've never heard of that house being sold." He also said that the home's "price tag is well beyond any price that I've ever heard." In a statement, the Show's creators, MTV, have denied that the house is no longer the property of its owners. "The house is currently on the market," an MTV spokesman told Us Weekly. While the real estate website says the house will likely be sold by this spring, others have reported that the owner has already found a new buyer. A recent article in the New York Post said that a buyer and the seller have agreed to split the money from the sale 50-50.Order before 3pm Monday-Friday for same day dispatch (orders placed after 3pm will be dispatched on the next working day).
