The role of intracardiac echocardiography (ICE) in the diagnosis of pulmonary stenosis (PS) is limited. In this study, we evaluate the efficacy and safety of ICE in the diagnosis and follow-up of PS. In this study we examined 68 patients with PS. We used ICE to obtain a detailed study of the spatial and morphological characteristics of PS, monitor changes in the valvular area under therapy, and estimate the obstruction severity. During 60-240 s of ICE in a patient with PS, the echocardiography probe moved through the valves in real time. Of the 68 patients, 67 (98%) with PS had a mean gradient of 20+/-9 mm Hg (range 0-60 mm Hg) in the main pulmonary artery. ICE confirmed PS in 32 (85%) of these. ICE showed that the mean pressure gradient across the right ventricular outflow tract was associated with the severity of PS in 37 (51%) of the 67 patients. In all patients, ICE identified characteristic features and functional alterations in PS, detected the presence of transvalvular gradient exceeding the typical reference limit, and enabled treatment decisions and follow-up. No complications were seen during ICE. ICE is a safe and effective

Change: The theme of the app on the home screen has not changed ...Q: Is the Project Template feature still available in Sharepoint Online? We have this feature on document library (after installing app) where you can create a new document based on template that has pre-defined column and just modify one property. Is this feature still available? I can't seem to find the link in the ribbon nor using the site settings menu. A: The Create a template feature is still available in SharePoint on-premises as it is one of the available features of the Document Library Setting on the Workflows tab (as of SP2019). After creating the document library, go to Workflows > Document library settings > Workflows and they should be available. Also, they have made these steps easier by adding an option in the list/library to open the settings from the ribbon on top left (below document library name) as shown below: Pages Monday, August 16, 2009 St. Louis Cardinals: Worthy of the Respect Despite what you may have read here and there over the past week, it doesn't look like the Cardinals are finished either in the NL Central or as a dynasty. Instead, they merely have great pitching and a paltry offense. Sure, the Cards are probably going to win the division, but they have a lot of teams with mediocre pitching to challenge, including the Angels, Cubs, Phillies, Brewers, and Pirates. If the Cards can win the division, they'll likely go on to finish near the top of the NL in the playoffs, which is exactly what we wanted when we put the Royals on the map. First, the pitching. As Jim Edmonds said, pitching is what wins ballgames, and the Cardinals happen to have one of the best in the league. 04aeff104c
