Genetic parameters of gross and fine wool traits and the relationship between coat and fleece in Rambouillet and Targhee sheep. Ewes of the Rambouillet (R) and Targhee (T) breeds are bred to produce fine wool and have a high proportion of natural red color in their fleece. Although the 2 breeds have very different breeding objectives, the genetic relationships between the 2 breeds are poorly understood. Heritabilities, genetic correlations and the relationship between coat and fleece were estimated for 21 wool traits in both breeds. The genetic correlations between both breeds were generally similar to each other. Genetic correlations between the R and T breeds ranged from -0.38 to 0.98 for all traits. Correlations between coat and fleece traits within breeds ranged from 0.07 to 0.82. The genetic correlation between total wool yield (TWY) and total yield of wool expressed as length per 100g (TW-100) was -0.50, indicating that selection to increase TW-100 in the Targhee breed could reduce the TWY in the Rambouillet breed. The genetic correlations between mean wool weight (MWW) and mean fiber diameter (MWD) in both breeds were similar to the phenotypic correlations. The genetic correlation between MWW and TW-100 was -0.60. Heritabilities for all of the traits examined were similar to or slightly lower than those estimated in previous studies on the same traits. Estimates of the genetic correlations between all traits within the 2 breeds and between the 2 breeds
