For example, I often use the Eraser tool to clear a photo of marks made by the printmaking process. It is also used to remove backgrounds from photographs. You don't need to load the entire shape. You don't have to cut or flush. You can immediately apply the path to any layer. Editing the path is easy. You can easily make adjustments to the shape or fill the shape with a solid color. The magic is in the shortcut key 'E' and automatically variable selection handles that clip an existing layer so it can be reused in other layers.
