Type the same password from step 9, without the double quotes. I was trying to avoid a CMD prompt. I also learned to throw a few punts and manage the scoreboard, but that's not what I learned at Green Valley, and it's certainly not what I want to teach my kids. My goal in having my kids play sports in high school is to build a solid foundation of athletic skill, character, and discipline. I want my daughter to be confident that she can throw the ball and run a relay because she's strong and powerful, and she's confident that she can't put the ball down without being certain she's going to catch it. I want my son to be the same way. I don't want him to worry if his peers think he's weak because he's small or slow, I want him to be strong and bold, because confidence is its own reward. Athletic excellence isn't measured by one's score on a test. It's measured by how hard a person works, how much you've developed skills and character, and
